Mrs. L. D. Payne

PAYNE FAMILY.

Capt. John Smith's History of the Colony of Virginia says : "Three brothers, Sir Robert, John, and William Payne came over to the Colony, in the 'Second Supply,' under Governor Yeardley, A.D. 1620. Sir Robert, who was a member of the 'London Charter Company,' returned after having settled his brothers on chartered lands. John settled in 'Northern Neck.' "

W. W. Payne, Esq., of Warrenton, Virginia, says : "The Payne family is of great antiquity and of Norman-English descent. The cradle of the family was in Normandy, France ; in the 10th century the Paynes Seigneurs were resident in and around St. Lo ; the Paynes of England deduce their descent from these Norman Lords."

Hayden says : "Sir Robert Payne had two brothers, William and John, who from England emigrated to America," etc. John James Woodville Payne, of Estill Springs, Tenn., says : "Three brothers of excellent English stock emigrated to America from England in 1619. They were Sir Robert, William, and John Payne. Sir Robert returned to England, William settled near Jamestown, John settled in what is known as the 'Northern Neck' of Virginia, extending from Northumberland on the bay to the counties of Fauquier, Fairfax, and Culpepper." There is a colonial record that Sir Robert Payne came to America from England, but no family. His name is recorded as a trustee in the Church of Essex, Gloucester County, Va.

"The Payne family is a very ancient one of England" (says Mr. John James Woodville Payne, of Estill Springs, Tenn.), "and the name is recorded in Domesday Book, a register made by William the Conqueror in 1081, containing a survey of all the lands in the kingdom, the value, etc. In Bailey's old English Dictionary the name is derived from the French 'Payen,' a heathen or pagan. Honorable mention is made of the family in the Country Gentry of England." Genealogy of the Payne Family, by Albert Paine of Maine, says: "At first the name was Paganus, then Pagan—Pagen—Payne—Paine, all being corruptions of the original name with the rather uncomplimentary meaning, heathen. Although spelling their names differently all the Paynes are of the same family. The first ancestor we have the surname of is Hugh de Paen, who went with his friend Robert on the Crusades to the Holy Land. Hugh's father was inseparable from William the Conqueror, and the friendship begun by them was continued by their sons Robert and Hugh. During this expedition Hugh acquired fame and the title to knighthood by his prowess and courage. At the termination of the Crusades, Hugh, with a friend, instituted an order known as 'Templars of the Cross,' the sole object of which was to further the great object of the Crusaders' mission, by protecting the Holy Places and rendering safe the journey of all pilgrims to the holy shrine. The original organization had only nine members, but soon assumed colossal proportions."

Col. William Payne, who died about 1800, served in the Continental Army, and was one of President George Washington's pall-bearers.

John Payne and William Payne, brothers of Sir Robert Payne, came over to America in 1620. They both were knighted by King James I. before leaving England, and were specially mentioned by James in the first land charter granted to a company, May 23, 1609.

Robert Treat Paine, one of the signers of the Declaration of Independence, was of the same family. His ancestors, having emigrated to France, adopted the French style of spelling, and changed the y to i.

In the latter part of the eighteenth century it was the custom of the gentry to assemble and nominate a candidate to the House of Burgesses. It was also understood that if the day was unfavorable they would defer the meeting to the first suitable day.

The morning appointed for the meeting was cloudy, but it was not raining. General (then Colonel) Washington, Lord Fairfax, and others did not attend, thinking there would be no meeting. Sir Edward Payne, William Payne, and others met, and nominated Col. William Elzy. The other party, being very much dissatisfied, met afterward, and nominated Lord Fairfax. Party feeling ran very high. The day of the election, General Washington, Captain Spenser, William Payne, Jr., and others were standing together talking; they were all very much excited. About noon it became evident that Lord Fairfax would be defeated. General Washington was engaged in a warm controversy with William Payne, during which he made some reflections on Mr. Payne's integrity. William Payne immediately seized a walking-cane Captain Spenser held in his hand, and laying his left hand on the shoulder of Captain Spenser who was standing between him and General Washington, he sprang up and knocked General Washington down. Friends interposed and separated them. The next day General Washington sent Mr. Payne a note, requesting him to meet him at the Eagle Tavern, Alexandria, Va., at a certain hour. Mr. Payne went with the expectation of fighting a duel. General Washington met Mr. Payne at the door of the tavern, and, extending his hand, he said: "Mr. Payne, I was wrong yesterday; I wish to be right to-day. You had some little satisfaction; if you are content with it, I should like to bury the past over a bottle of wine with you." Some years afterward General Washington invited Mr. Payne to visit him at Mount Vernon, and he accepted his invitation.

The General received Mr. Payne at the door, and ushering him into his wife's presence said : "My dear, this is the little gentleman who had the courage to knock me down, big as I am."

— Payne of St. Christopher's (Bart.), of an ancient Devonshire family, son of Stephen Payne of St. Christopher, member of council in that island, and supporter of Charles I. during the civil war, fled from England after the battle of Worcester, and settled in the Island of St. Christopher.

Genl. Gustavus Woodson Smith stated, in November, 1895, that he had many times been told by his grandfather Rodes Smith of his, Rodes Smith's, belonging to the Revolutionary Army, and as a boy of fifteen years being at the surrender of Cornwallis.

Garland Smith was a practical joker ; walking home from town one day with a side of sole leather on his shoulder, he espied a boy coming with a sack of meal on a horse. Garland stepped behind a tree and as the boy came by dropped the roll of leather. The mare jumped of course, spilling boy and bag. The boy said, "Now, Garland, you knowed the mar' wur skeery."

The donor of this book, Professor L. Wayne Johnson, Department of Mathematics and Statistics, Oklahoma State University, Stillwater, Oklahoma, is interested in tracing another Payne family, known to have been in Fleming County, Kentucky shortly after the Revolutionary War. He would appreciate any information helpful to this end, and would be happy to exchange information.

Zadoc Payne, b. March 13, 1780, d. Sept. 6, 1855, m. Mary Vanzant, b. April 13, 1789, d. Dec. 20, 1866, d. of Elisha and Margaret Vanzant, in Fleming County, Kentucky, Sept. 24, 1805. His will was probated in Fleming County, Nov. 26, 1855, and names fifteen children: Sarah Hungerford, Maryann R., Martha Jane Crawford, Elijah F., Alfred J., Jesse C., Madison Monroe, William S., Janet, Margaret Evans, Malinda W. Lee, Elisha V., Alexander W., John M., and James V.

One story in the family is that Zadoc went from Culpeper County, Virginia to Washington County, Pennsylvania with Virginia troops sent to put down the Whiskey Rebellion, and that there he met Mary Vanzant, whom he later married in Kentucky. Another story has Zadoc originating on the Maryland East Shore.
